

Doc1 Solutions, L.L.C. Appoints New CEO

E-discovery attorney to take the helm at leading data, document and media solutions provider

Denver, June 10 2009 – Doc1 Solutions, a leader in data, document and media services for law firms, corporations and government agencies announced today that they have appointed James Crane to be the company's new Chief Executive Officer (CEO). As a recognized and respected electronic discovery attorney, Mr. Crane brings many years of practice experience in complex litigation including federal agency investigations, class actions, and multi-district litigation. Additionally, Mr. Crane has worked with corporate legal departments and their law firms to advise them regarding the integration of technology into their legal process, pre-litigation preparedness measures and data management and compliance.

"We considered many excellent candidates from within and outside of our industry during the search for our new CEO," said Keith Montoya, Doc1 Solutions President and co-owner. "James brings a broad skill set and perspective with his combined legal and technical experience and expertise and is known in the industry and by his clients as someone you can trust. He also shares our passion and commitment to create a corporate culture that values people, whether they're employees, clients, or partners. James is the right leader for Doc1, and he has what it takes to lead our growth into new markets, expanding our client base and service offerings, and becoming a recognized leader in creating best-of-breed solutions."

Mr. Crane has established a long list of satisfied clients in both the law firm and corporate legal world and has represented parties in some of the largest actions of the last decade. In the last few years, his practice has become more focused on developing measures to ensure corporations are compliant with electronic discovery requirements, specifically those set out under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure as amended December 1, 2006. He is an established author and speaker on a variety of topics including the interpretation of case law developments, the efficient use of technology in the legal process, and proactive measures companies can take to manage their data and create a more defensible litigation climate.

"Doc1 has distinguished itself in the Denver marketplace as a go-to firm for litigation support with first-class people providing high quality document, data and media services and a long list of loyal and satisfied clients," said James Crane, CEO of Doc1 Solutions. "My plan is to work with the great talent and leadership already in place to further raise our company profile, expand our service offerings, capitalize on the many available growth opportunities, and provide all of our clients, existing and new, the very best value they can find."

Eric Gonzales, Doc1 Solutions Chief Operations Officer and co-owner, said, "James has the ideal background for what we are setting out to accomplish. In our initial discussions of his plans for Doc1, the strategic vision he has presented, combined with our existing capabilities, are going to propel Doc1 into a new stratosphere."

About Doc1 Solutions

Doc1 Solutions provides data, document and media services to law firms, corporations and government agencies in Colorado and nationwide. Since 2002, Doc1 has provided a wide array of solutions including scanning, copying, printing, data hosting, data conversion (EDD), and computer forensic services to hundreds of clients. Founded in 2002, Doc1 is a privately held company and is certified as an SBA 8(a) certified business. The company is headquartered in Denver, Colorado. For more information, visit www.doc1solutions.com.